President's Message

Nearly 20 years ago, I was a dad searching for a hobby that I thought both my son and I could enjoy together. Just by chance (providence?) the State Quarter program was in its infancy. My son (CSNS Governor and IT Chairman Samuel Ernst) and I started looking up coins and coin collecting online together. One site we discovered was the Collectors Universe message boards. On that site we discovered a group of wonderful people who wanted to help a YN (and a dad) starting out. We still have friendships that began from that site. Later, we found a local club and from there branched out in our hobby involvement.

That was then, this is now. In those intervening years numismatics has given both my son and me numerous opportunities, recognitions, friends and years of enjoyment. Through those years, however, we have also seen firsthand the changes to the hobby; sales tax exemptions, the internet, and yes, the aging demographic of our clubs and organizations.

The future of our beloved hobby is uncertain. Like many hobbies our demographic is aging. Young people today are distracted by their smart phones, social media and any number of other electronic preoccupations. That is why I was so thrilled that my 25-year-old son wanted to run for the CSNS Board.

Oh, I know some people didn't like the idea of a father and son serving together. I heard the comments, either secondhand or directly. But, for an organization to have a millennial interested enough to serve I felt it would be foolish to discourage his interest. The idea that somehow there would be nepotism on the Board seemed ridiculous to me because anyone who has ever had kids knows that they rarely do what you ask them to do, anyway.

But my son is a rare case in that he still has interest in the hobby and is interested in serving the hobby at his age. Ensuring the success of our hobby and CSNS is, and will continue to be, a challenge as we move forward. As a nonprofit organization with a numismatic mission, we have to start thinking about the future now. There has been a tendency to spend our equity on the here and now, rather than invest in the future. I mean, who doesn't enjoy a free meal or free admission at an event? The annual chicken dinner at a local coin club is reason enough to be a member, right? We all have become accustomed to the benefits our hobby involvement and club memberships have provided.

I believe that we (the numismatic hobby) have to start thinking about the future. The days when a coin show and dues actually funded the operations of an organization are long gone. Ensuring the longevity and success of our hobby in general and CSNS specifically has become an expensive proposition. CSNS has literally spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on education programs for our members. Many of those programs were at either no cost or low cost to the attendees. Do you think it is too much to ask of those of us who have benefited so much from the programs of CSNS to actually think about giving back?

Ray Lockwood

Saying that, there is no better, immediate way that one can give back than with a monetary contribution. I have been so pleased to see the support for our Ray Lockwood Memorial fundraising efforts. It has shown how much you, our membership, appreciated Ray and his years of service and the friendship he offered to our members. Thank you. But, CSNS does not have an endowment like the ANA. We have to rely on and ask for your continued and ongoing support. Without it, we will continue to struggle to fund the education programs of which so many of you enjoy and have taken advantage. Without the support, the gifts, the donations and the sponsorships of our membership and the larger numismatic community, I wonder if any numismatic hobby organization, including CSNS, will continue to survive.

I have received a few complaints by clubs and members at the suspension of three of our education programs and our awards breakfast at next year's convention. Those were not easy decisions, but "spending down" our money and financially subsidizing our member clubs is no longer an option. If our members, who have benefited, or have enjoyed seeing others benefit from our programs in the past want to see those programs, and more importantly, CSNS continue I want to ask you to remember CSNS in your charitable giving.

When our new Board was elected, I reminded them of their fundraising responsibilities. Yes, fundraising is a responsibility when you serve on a non-profit board. I was pleased to see our board's acknowledgement of that duty. So, as President Kennedy is so famously remembered for telling the American people "to ask not what" could be done for them, but instead "to ask what they could do" I find myself doing the same to you, the CSNS membership.

Before my term is over I would like to institute a Development Committee for CSNS whose function would be to look into ways to ensure the future of the organization. An important part of that would be a strategic plan that would guide and give ongoing direction to future boards. A strategic plan is just that, a plan. The purpose of a strategic plan is to give the organization a goal to set, a target at which to aim. Otherwise, boards find themselves constantly reinventing the wheel and never really going anywhere as new leadership comes and goes with new plans and objectives, often at cross purposes. I would also like to look into beginning a development plan that helps finance the future of CSNS through the generous gifts of our members now. There is a Greek proverb that says, "A civilization flourishes when people plant trees under which they will never sit."

Many of you have read or heard of the account of my taking the two-year course in nonprofit and fundraising management. Through that course of study, I learned that donations, sponsorships and planned giving are the lifeblood of most nonprofits. CSNS is not and should not be the exception. I've wondered why CSNS is overlooked by so many in our beloved hobby when they leave a gift in their will. Could it be that we've never asked? Could it be that our members don't think we are a worthy place to leave a legacy? If that is the case, I'd like to help begin to change that perception.

We have many award sponsorships, exhibit area sponsorships, Summer Seminar sponsorships and other convention sponsorships that could use your help. CSNS is like that beautiful, old, landmark building in your hometown that is being threatened to be raised because it has fallen into disrepair due to lack of care. Often, buildings like that are taken for granted until they become derelict and then suddenly they no longer exist. Sadly, once those historical structures are gone, they are gone for good.

With our aging demographic, now really is the time for us all to consider our opportunities to ensure that CSNS is still around in the future for our children and grandchildren to enjoy as we have. Please consider CSNS as you look to your yearend giving this year and your planned giving in the years ahead.

If you would like to talk about the opportunities to leave a legacy at Central States, please contact me.

Kevin Foley

From the Convention Chairman

Probably the biggest story in the world of numismatics to emerge over the past several months is something that has nothing to do with what rarity will be offered at auction or what previously unknown item has been discovered. I refer to the recent Supreme Court ruling that overturned the 1992 Quill Corp. v. North Dakota decision.

Under the rules established by that case, a merchant shipping otherwise taxable merchandise into another state was only obligated to collect the destination state's retail sale tax if they had a physical presence in that state. It then became the obligation of the receiving consumer to self-report the purchase and pay their own receiving state's use tax, which generally is a percentage equal to the sales tax.

When the original Quill decision was handed down the structure of interstate commerce was substantially different than at present. Online shopping from out of state merchants has grown exponentially since 1992 and comprises a larger and larger share of consumer purchases with each passing year.

Use-tax payments are probably observed more in the breach than in compliance, and state tax authorities have become increasingly concerned about revenue leakage due to use-tax payment non-compliance. The more recent 2018 case of South Dakota v. Wayfair Inc. overruled that earlier decision and gave states the right to require out-of-state vendors to collect the receiving state's sales tax from the customer making the out-of-state purchase at the out-of-state point of sale, regardless of whether they have a physical presence in the receiving state.

While there have been vocal expressions of concern in the numismatic press about the impact of the 2018 Wayfair decision on numismatic dealers, my own opinion parallels that expressed by Steve Ivy in a recent Coin World interview. I basically see this as a nonevent. Indeed, there is a substantial business and profit opportunity that the Wayfair decision opens up that no one in the articles I have seen even hints at.

Perhaps the strongest expression of concern about the Wayfair decision -- and let's not lose sight of the fact that numismatic purchases are already exempt, either in whole or part from sales and use taxes in roughly 37 states, so for purchasers accepting delivery in those states this will be largely a nonevent -- is that there will be an administrative burden on the out-of-state merchant required to collect sales taxes for purchases to sales-tax states where that requirement had not previously existed.

Will that really be such a crushing burden? Aren't there already computer programs merchants of any kind anywhere can subscribe to that update and compute sales taxes that merchants with a physical presence of any sort in a sales-tax state are already required to pay and seem to have little difficulty doing so? The Steve Ivy Coin World interview indicated that Heritage already is required to and does collect sales taxes applicable in seven states that the firm ships merchandise into based on the physical presence rule long ago established in the 1992 Quill decision.

What about the “substantial business and profit opportunity” I made reference to above? Do you really think that the wealthy art investor resident in New York City who purchases a $20 million painting pays the roughly $1.6 million sales tax that would apply if he took delivery in New York. It is not at all unusual in the world of high-value art investment for the purchaser to never actually take delivery of his investment in the state of his residence with a retail sales tax, but instead to accept delivery and store his investment in a bonded and climate controlled warehouse in a jurisdiction with no sales tax at all on anything. After a number of years when the purchaser feels his investment has matured the art work is consigned again to auction, never having seen the light of day from one purchaser to the next.

Del Bertschy

Watch to see enterprising dealers offer such delivery and storage services in the future. Obviously, for the resident of a state where numismatic items currently enjoy a sales tax exemption the reversal of the Quill decision will not have any effect on their own purchases.

What will the future really hold as a result of the Wayfair decision? Only the future will ultimately reveal that. Everything else, including my thoughts above, as to future consequences are simply speculation. Some of what I've read about the Wayfair decision has, at least in my opinion, bordered on the-sky-is-falling near hysteria and prediction of improbable "what ifs." My own feeling is that the Wayfair decision simply recognizes a not previously anticipated evolution of commerce and consumer purchasing preferences and creates a more fair and level competitive free market playing field for the merchants in all states.

As some of you who have been around for a while may remember, my initial role in CSNS was as editor of The Centinel, a post then president Del Bertschy appointed me to in 1980 and which I held until 1989, when I was succeeded by Jim and Karen Jach. Karen, by the way, is still affiliated with CSNS and is now our immediate past president. Perhaps because of that background actually being responsible for The Centinel, I've always taken a particular interest in its content.

Our Summer issue contained a document that makes it a real "saver" that anyone associated with the governance of any sort of nonprofit organization should read, reread and take to heart, the Board Governance Policy promulgated by our new president, Mitch Ernst. That document is at one and the same time a succinct yet especially compelling statement about how a nonprofit board should conduct its affairs, especially with respect to the obligations and appropriate conduct for the board members themselves. I consider it to be quite literally a transformative contribution to the operation of our organization and feel that in time its implementation will make a significant contribution to the effectiveness of our board and organization. 📄

Thank you!

The Central States Numismatic Society lost one of its most loyal and dedicated workers early this year, long time officer and Education Director Ray Lockwood. Ray was also an engaged supporter of our widely acclaimed educational exhibit program, as well as being a collector of various issues of United States and world paper money. In order to recognize and memorialize Ray's many contributions to the Central States Numismatic Society, the Educational Exhibit Committee has designated the three United States Paper Money Awards as the Ray Lockwood Memorial Awards and has established a segregated fund to receive donations to underwrite this award moving forward, as well as contributing to the more general support of the educational exhibiting aspect of our Anniversary Conventions. The individuals and entities listed below have contributed to this newly established fund. Thank you to all for your generosity and expressions of respect and admiration for the memory of Ray Lockwood.

Patricia Foley

Bourse Chairman and Secretary

Although our 2018 event has been over for less than four months as I write this, I'm seeing an especially enthusiastic response to our 2019 80th Anniversary Convention, with bourse dates of April 24-27. In fact, early interest is running at a much higher level than anything I've experienced since becoming bourse chairman at our 2013 event. Hotel reservations under our room block are running about 20 percent ahead of last year. The early days - Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday - are close to being sold out, so I hope you will book your room as soon as you are able. Our rate is $164. To reserve your room, please call the hotel at (847) 303-4100 and mention "Central States Numismatic 2019" to access our $164 rate. If you have any problems securing a room call convention chairman Kevin Foley at (414) 807-0116 for assistance.

I think that one of the reasons why there is a surge of interest in our 2019 convention is the fact that for the first time, our convention will have a specialized world and ancient dealers section in the bourse area. We've allocated 30 booths to this area, and as of early August, 20 are already reserved. If you are a dealer wondering whether you want to be part of this, I do hope that you'll contact me about booth space while we are still able to accommodate you. Our official auction company, Heritage, is supporting this expansion of our bourse area by adding a specialized world and ancient auction to their already strong two specialty Signature Sale offerings in the United States coins and United States paper money areas. So, moving forward for 2019 both our bourse area and our Heritage Signature Sales will include just about anything and everything that is bought and sold in the world of numismatics.

I should also mention that the redesign of our website, carried out under the guidance of our youngest elected official, Gov. Samuel Ernst, is virtually complete and should be up and running by the time you receive this issue of The Centinel. The convention chairman and I are responsible for contributing content related to our convention and we try to include basically everything one needs to know about the event, so please visit the new website to find information about our 2019 convention.

It really seems hard to believe, but our 2019 event will mark the sixth CSNS convention that I've served as bourse chairman and will actually be the 26th year since I started working at coin shows in a myriad of different capacities. Some of you I remember from those very earliest years; while a fair number of you are relatively recent acquaintances.

One aspect of my position as bourse chairman that I especially enjoy is having my own bourse chairman's booth at the convention and interacting with so many of our members, including dealers, experienced collectors and beginners just starting to test the waters. I find it quite remarkable the diverse backgrounds and outside interests that our attendees share with me during your stops at my booth. The one central factor that all have in common is a love of collecting - even within the world of numismatics there exist incredible varieties of interests, with something one of our attendees feels is worthy of nothing more than an occasional yawn being a near obsession with the next person I interact with.

With 300+ booths representing just about anything one can think of in the world of numismatics, I really do think our convention is a “must” for anyone with an interest in numismatics. I do hope you’ll accept my invitation to come next April. If you do and especially if I’ve never met you, please remember to stop at my booth and introduce yourself. I do surprise myself sometimes with how many of the names on our membership list I have a mental image of what you look like.

Our convention chairman once shared with me a story about remarks made from the podium at a CSNS banquet during the 1980’s by then Gov. Ray Lefman about the value he attached to the many friendships he’d made through his CSNS membership. I can certainly understand that sentiment.

See you in April! 🍷

Education Director's Report

I would like to remind our member clubs of our educational outreaches.

First is our DVD program. Each member club of CSNS is entitled to five DVDs each year under our program. That's like having five numismatic experts at your club meeting talking on a wide variety of topics five times each year.

How would like to hear Q. David Bowers speak on "Obsolete Paper Money, History, Rarity and Today's Market" at your club meeting some month? Then order DVD # ANA14-031 Or, how about watching "The Penny Lady," Charmy Harker talk about "Lincoln Penny Exonumia. Things Made out of or Using Lincoln cents." That's DVD # ANA15-033.

These speakers can't be at every club meeting in all of our 13 states. But, you can still learn from them and gain from their valuable insights by ordering the DVD.

Penny Lady Charmy Harker discusses Lincoln cent exonumia on a DVD available free to CSNS member clubs.

A Central States DVD of Centinel Editor Gerald Tebben's presentation on the 1994 Vietnam Veterans Memorial commemorative dollar.

To order these exciting educational opportunities, please email me at president@centralstatesnumismaticsociety@gmail.com and let me know you want a copy of the DVD list. The DVD list is 127 pages long, so we cannot mail it. But, it is easy to send the list to your club in a PDF in an email. Then, after looking through the DVD offerings, submit your order to me either at the email above, or mail your DVD requests to me at P.O. Box 24559 Omaha, NE 68124.

Also, I'd like to remind you about our club speaker program. There are times when a numismatic professional can come and speak at your club. In those cases, we'd like you help you afford their trip to speak to you. CSNS will reimburse clubs up to $200 for their costs in having a speaker come in and speak at a club meeting. Travel expenses, lodging, you decide what you want to be reimbursed. But, to qualify for the reimbursement, your club will have to show mileage, proof of lodging, etc. As in any expense report, you have to show you had an expense before you can be reimbursed for it. And really, that isn't asking for the unusual, is it? We are limiting this program to 10 total speakers per year. So, if your club wants to take advantage of this program, please contact us to make sure there are reimbursements remaining.

Before I end, I want to point your attention to an exciting addition to our 80th Anniversary Convention in Schaumburg next year. John L. Schuch II, will be leading a two- day, preconvention course on "Introduction to Coin Grading."

Schuch, who recently joined Northern Nevada Coins as a numismatist, was an NGC grader for 13 years and has conducted ANA Summer Seminar courses for eight years. The course will cost $150 and will be held the Monday and Tuesday prior to our convention. If you are interested in attending, pre-registration is mandatory. The class is limited in size to only 15, so if you are interested, register now. You can find the registration form on page 38

Also, I want to remind you all about the fantastic educational speakers we always have at our convention. You know we hold a convention each year, right? Schaumburg, IL. suburb of Chicago? The Renaissance Schaumburg Convention Center at 1551 N. Thoreau Dr. in Schaumburg, IL? Yep, that's the place. We have some wonderful speakers and seminars lined up for our 80th Anniversary Convention, so please start making your plans now to attend. 🍷

George Cuhaj

THE YOUNG NUMISMATIST

The 40-year development of YN programs

Your president has asked me to contribute a column on what coin clubs can do to encourage the young collector. Presented here will be some success stories from the local as well as the national levels. I'll also share some dismal failures that we all can learn from.

My personal journey in the enjoyment of this hobby started in a different time and place – namely the New York City of the early 1970s. My father was a stamp collector. I had been attending stamp shows with him as young as 8, attending the youth programs at the various big spring and fall shows, until when presented an opportunity to give a presentation on a small part of my collection, I was handed a certificate with my name spelled wrong. Oh they got the George right, it was the Cuhaj which seemed to give the organizers some difficulty. Even though it was a handwritten certificate, no extras were available to make a correction, and that was it for me. Done. I walked away from that event and tried not to look back. I still have that certificate in my album of “stuff.”

It would be three years before I tried anything in the philatelic arena again, and that was through a scouting connection, when the Greater New York Councils co-sponsored a Scout Day at the United Nations and there was a component for a writing contest on “How U.N. stamps help spread the message of the U.N.” I entered and won a third place award. It was 1974 and by then I had attended my first International NY Numismatic Convention show, joined the ANA and visited the ANS museum in upper Manhattan.

ANA and YN activities

Membership certainly has its privileges. One receives the print or electronic versions of The Numismatist each month. It is very much an on-going reminder of hobby activities with a bunch of knowledge thrown in.

Currently a youth member can earn “Coins for As” for being a good student. For doing hobby activities, one can earn ancient coins – Roman and Byzantine, as well as early American coins. These activities range from giving talks to a school group or club, writing an article and exhibiting.

In the fall of 1973 I was entering one of the largest high schools in the NYC public school system – Brooklyn Technical. I got to participate in the weekly meetings of the coin club and eventually became vice president before the NYC budget crisis put an end to nearly all club and sport activities for a year. But before that all happened, I was hooked on the ANA’s Ancient Coin Project, which got me to write, speak and become involved.

Fortunately during that time in addition to the NYINC show, the Long Island Coin Club sponsored the Grand Central Coin Show and American Israel Numismatic Association sponsored a spring show and the Metropolitan New York Numismatic Convention was a spring boutique show. Each of these shows had a half-day program of guest speakers, youth speakers and other educational activities for young people. The clubs that had meetings - Flushing Coin Club, Queens County Coin Club, Long Island Coin Club and the New York Numismatic Club all had a strict policy of no YN members (either 18 or 21), several allowed attendance to meetings when accompanied by a parent.

However, those who sponsored shows allowed older YNs to help with the setup and breakdown of the show (read: move cases). They were willing to accept you if you worked hard.

Within a short time - it was the build up to the 1976 New York City ANA convention - and with that attention, I gained some exposure to folks on the national numismatic scene. It was my first experience at a “national” convention (even though it was in the home town).

I answered the call to place an educational exhibit for the first time (yikes). I got to meet some very nice exhibit committee folks who were friends with the ANA correspondence course advisor I had, and we hit it off nicely with plenty of pointers and encouragement for the future. I got to spend some quality time with David R. Cervin, founder of the Ancient Coin Project and enjoyed a trip to the Statue of Liberty as well as both a Yankee and a Mets game. And it was my first exposure to some deep politics in the ANA’s YN Committee world of local vs. national where I got to experience firsthand how folks with a national ambition can co-op programs for their own importance.

So, with the National Convention in NYC, it was also an exposure to ANA program opportunities of Summer Seminar and Club Scholarships as well as encouragement to write for a larger audience.

So, what should your quick takeaways be? Young people have a great memory and slights will be remembered. Learn names and use them properly. Get youth exposed and have them participate at their own pace. Young people can organize, plan and lead with guidance.

Stack's Bowers Galleries is pleased to announce their upcoming offering of The Archangel Collection of Colonial Coins and 1792 Coinage. This incredible cabinet comprises over 150 pieces, acquired in the 1970s and early 1980s. Many of the coins trace their pedigrees to some of the finest collections offered during those decades, including the Garrett, Park, Robison, Spence and Roper collections.

The Archangel Collection covers the entire range of colonial coins with a particular focus on superb quality, including rarities in the Massachusetts Bay, Lord Baltimore, Higley, and Carolina Elephant series. Among early American pieces, there are great rarities among the state coinages, as well as 1776 Continental dollars, Washington pieces, and many others. Of special note is an impressive selection of 1792-dated Federal coinage, pieces struck just prior to the opening of the United States Mint in 1793.

I.T. chair's report

New CSNS website readied

Home page navigation features pull-down menus across the top

Hello readers,

My name is Samuel Ernst and I was recently elected to the Central States Board. I am currently serving Central States as the I.T. Committee chairman. In this role I have been working on making some exciting changes to our technological platforms.

First off, Central States is now on Twitter! Be sure to follow us as we retweet news from the U.S. Mint, Coin World, Krause Publications and other numismatic news outlets. We are also trying to post more frequently on Facebook and provide relevant, interesting information.

The annual convention will have its own section.

Now for the most exciting news; Central States is getting a new website! Some of you may have noticed that parts of the current website are a little outdated. This is because we felt it was better to focus on the new website rather than update a website that would soon be gone. It is my hope that the new website is intuitive and easy to navigate and packed full of all the features and information you need. Included are some snapshots of the new layout and I hope you like it as much as I do.

The expected launch of the new site is late September or early October. If that changes we will be sure to let everyone know via our social media outlets. Some things may change between now and September so don't expect the final product to look exactly the same. As we near the launch we will post about some new features our website offers so stay tuned!

Past president Harry Tileston dies at 90

Harry Bryant Tileston III, who served Central States for 16 years as governor, vice president and president, died Aug. 8 at age 90.

"Always cheerful and gregarious, Harry Tileston lived 90 years and was active right to the end. 'I'm going to wear out not rust out!' was his motto," his obituary notice read.

Mr. Tileston, who was born June 16, 1928, was orphaned at age 10. He was under the care of the Louisville, KY, foster care system until age 18 when, after graduating at the top of his class from Anchorage high school, he joined the Army where he served in the Medical Corps in Osaka, Japan, from 1946-48.

Upon his return to Louisville, he married his high school sweetheart, Susie Crask, who survives him. They had two sons, Keith (Rose Duvall) who preceded him in death, and David (Marysue) who survives him.

He earned an honors degree in economics from the University of Louisville and was employed by General Electric for 30 years, before retiring in 1983 as manager of information systems.

Mr. Tileston's lifelong passion was numismatics. He started collecting in 1938, was among the organizers of the Louisville Coin Club in 1948 and was a charter member of the Indiana State Numismatic Association in 1958. He served as a Boy Scout coin collecting merit badge instructor, provided free coin appraisals to senior citizens and was a member of numerous coin clubs, including the ANA, EAC, Kentucky State Numismatic Association (since merged with the Louisville Coin Club), Phoenix (Arizona) Coin Club, Aurora (Illinois) Coin Club and the Coshocton (Ohio) Coin Club, often serving as an officer.

Mr. Tileston won election to the Central States Board in the spring of 1992 and served without interruption until retiring in 2008. He was elected vice president in 2000, president in 2002 and served as immediate past president from 2004 to 2006. He was elected to his final two-year term on the Board in 2006.

CSNS Treasurer Jack D. Huggins Jr. said, "He still showed up at spring show for next few years to provide wisdom to the Board."

He said, "Harry was chairman of finance of CSNS for those 16 years. I served with him for 10 years. Harry did everything to keep CSNS finance on track. As president he ran a professional board meeting without problems. Yet he always sat at CSNS booth or message booth and even the exhibit area, talking with members and the public and listening to their problems and concerns with CSNS; and then he would try to fix them. Harry was always proud to wear the gold coat back then as CSNS Board member."

Convention General Chairman Kevin Foley recalled, "Harry took great pride in his service on the CSNS Board, especially as our president, and was a real worker on behalf of the organization. It was always a pleasure to work with him."

He was buried Aug. 13 at the Middletown Historical Cemetery, following a funeral service at the Ratterman Funeral Home in East Louisville, KY.

The One Who Didn't Win?

By Mark Benvenuto

Those in charge of the United States Mint recently came up with a rather colorful way to honor the centennial of what are now three classic U.S. coin designs, those on our Mercury dime, our Standing Liberty quarter, and our Walking Liberty half dollar. This sort of reboot of a trio of amazingly artistic images had never really been done before, although we can argue that the unveiling of the silver and gold Eagles in 1986 might have come close.

Albin Polášek poses with Victory of Moral Law, his first major work after he suffered a stroke. The 1956 sculpture of St. George slaying a dragon is an allegory for the Hungarian Revolution, with the dragon representing the Soviet Union.

Most long-time collectors know that originally these three designs were the result of a competition, but not the open competitions we think of today. A century ago it was only three very well-known artists who were invited to submit images for what would become a new set of silver coins for the nation. Mr. Adolph A. Weinman won for both the Mercury dime design (aka. the Winged Liberty dime), and for the Walking Liberty half dollar design. The Standing Liberty quarter design was that of Mr. Hermon A MacNeil. But what about the third artist? What about the man who only appears briefly in most of the numismatic references, one Mr. Albin Polášek? In short, who was Albin Polášek?

Without doing any research, and with just a brief thought on the matter, Mr. Polášek had to have been a highly accomplished artist as the twentieth century unfolded. How else could he have been included in the invitation to submit new coin designs to the Mint in their extremely exclusive contest? But wait, we're getting a bit ahead of ourselves here. Let's start at the beginning.

The dime that never was

From The Albin Polasek Museum & Sculpture Gardens in Winter Park, FL.

Polášek's proposed design for a dime in 1916, showing an image of an American eagle and traditional dime inscriptions. His design for what would ultimately become the Mercury dime (1916-1945) was rejected. ... The back is signed in pencil by the artist, probably at a later date. The inscription reads: "Albin Polasek 9 MacDougal Alley N.Y.C.," which is the location of his New York studio address from 1913 to mid 1916. -- from the Albin Polasek Museum catalog.

Biographical sources indicate Mr. Polášek was born in the Austro-Hungarian Empire in 1879, in a chunk that has since become the Czech Republic. Apparently Albin was an artist even as a youngster, often carving in wood, at first only for his own family. At 22 he immigrated to the United States, and shortly began formal training as a sculptor at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts under the wing of Charles Grafty, himself a founding member of the National Sculpture Society.

Early Works and Prizes

Mr. Polášek appears to be one of those gifted few for whom the artistic muse was deep in him throughout his entire life. It was 1909 when Mr. Polášek decided that he would become a U.S. citizen. At about the same time, he produced some impressive sculptural pieces and thus began building a reputation for excellence in sculpture. He was not working exclusively in small sculpture – meaning medals – but with every piece he created he was honing and improving his art. As a young artist, he accumulated both fame and prizes for his work, including one at the 1915 Paris Salon for his very famous work, The Sower.

Albin Polášek's coinage design did not make the cut, but his medal for the 1926 Sesquicentennial International Exposition at Philadelphia was struck at the U.S. Mint's exhibit on the fair's grounds.

own work, and to influence that of others.

Curiously, his work was established and copious enough that there was an, "Exhibition of Sculpture at Albin Polášek at the Art Institute of Chicago January 5 to January 28 1917," the pamphlet for which can still be downloaded today! If Mr. P was upset about not winning a coin design for his very own, he did an excellent job of hiding it, at least to the public.

For all of us collectors who find this interesting, but who really wish there was a numismatic legacy connected to Mr. Polášek – well, there is! Believe it or not, the 1926 United States Sesquicentennial medal is his design and his artistry. The obverse can be considered traditional, with a bust of George Washington facing right, above the wording, PHILADELPHIA 1926 and surrounded by the words, SESQUICENTENNIAL INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION. But the reverse, well the reverse is what would probably have been on Interestingly, at the age of 37 Mr. Polášek was asked to be the department chair of the Sculpture Department of the Art Institute of Chicago – right in the heart of our own CSNS region. Remembering that he was born in 1879, this means Mr. P was made a life-changing offer right in the 1915 – 1916 time frame. Let's keep in mind that an offer like this wasn't made speedily, by phone, text, or email as it would be today. No, at that time a letter might have started the process off, followed by a train ride from his residence in New York City to Chicago, an official visit with Art Institute leaders, then another train ride home, then possibly a few more letters. This is worth noting because it was time consuming – at what appears to be the same time that the coinage redesign competition took place. It may have made a difference in his submission.

1916, Coins and Sculpture

The Art Institute of Chicago didn't just become another place to work – Mr. P was the new head of their Sculpture Department, but ultimately kept the position for nearly three decades. This was a big move for a famous, accomplished artist, one which provided him time to pursue his one of our silver coins had the judges made a different decision. There are no legends at all, rather a winged Pegasus dominates the side, ridden by a figure bearing a radiant torch in its left arm. The image is classical, is beautiful, and is certainly one we would find to be a bold design for any coin.

Legacy?

Since Mr. Polášek had almost thirty years at the helm of the Art Institute, his career encompassed many more works. Several of them, usually large sculptures, can be found in Illinois and Indiana, but there are others throughout the nation as well. He even kept working after having a stroke late in life, producing numerous large works. Indeed, a stroke that would stop many people in their tracks seems only to have sent Mr. P in 1950 to a warmer climate, Florida, where he taught himself late in his life to sculpt with just one hand! He died in 1965.

Mr. Polášek did not have a design in 1916 that became part of United States coinage history. But to claim he “didn’t win,” in light of the many other accomplishments and successes of his long career, would be a huge mis-statement. He has numerous prizes under his belt. He has the Sesquicentennial medal under that belt, too. And in a broader context, his legacy is all around us, even in the midst of our CSNS region. 🖼️

Meet the author

Mark Benvenuto, a chemistry professor at the University of Detroit Mercy, has written just over 1,000 print or online articles for numismatic periodicals and journals. One of his areas of research is the X-ray fluorescence analysis of ancient and medieval coins and trade items.

Why not circulated?

By James Davis

For many, numismatics, rather than being an enjoyable hobby has become an increasingly stressful experience. In some cases, the stress comes from competing with other collectors trying to assemble the finest known registry set. Other causes for collector stress comes from racing to the phone or internet trying to acquire the latest hot set from the Mint. One possible solution to this problem is to embrace your inner young numismatist and try to assemble a set from circulation.

Not feasible you say. Au contraire, my friend. There are several sets that can be put together at face value. The biggest expense would be buying the folders to hold your collection. If you want a more customized set, you can use 2x2 holders and place them in 20 pocket sheets.

For the sake of discussion, we will only examine cents through quarters. Each series has a doable set with only minimal stoppers.

A set of Lincoln Wheat Ears cents is almost impossible to complete from circulation. Yet with some looking, a set of wheat cents from 1941 to 1958 is possible. The hardest ones to find may be the 1943 steel cents. Memorial cents, starting in 1959 and ending in 2008, are an easy set, if you omit the large/small dates, the metal change of 1982 and the double dies. The Lincoln bicentennial issues of 2009 are becoming scarce but are still available and the shield cents of 2010 to date are so plentiful it is almost not worth mentioning.

Like the cents, a complete set of Jefferson nickels is almost impossible to put together from circulation. That is unless you focus on coins issued from 1961 to date. Here the only hard to find ones are the 2009 P & D.

Clad dimes from 1965 to date should provide little challenge to assemble. Odds are you won't find the two key dates, the 1982 no mintmark and the 1996 W in circulation. All others, apart from the 2009 P & D are plentiful.

Lastly, Washington quarters offer several possibilities. Assembling a set of the eagle-reverse, clad quarters is easy. There are no low mintages in this group. Following the eagle-reverse quarters are the state quarters. All state quarters have large mintages, although the territories are a bit smaller. The state quarters are followed by the current series honoring national parks. This set appears to be the most difficult of the three, as the distribution of the coins is uneven.

Look over these possibilities and choose the one that best appeals to you. Not only will this remind you why you took up the hobby in the first place, but you can use it to teach newcomers the joys of collecting. Who knows, you may just find a scarce date or an interesting error. If at the end you decide this is not for you, you can always spend the coins.

Lincolns from pocket change

With a bit of searching, a set of Lincoln, Wheat Ears cents from 1941 through 1958 can be completed, though 1943 steel cents can be elusive.

Lincoln Memorial cents, issued from 1959 through 2008, is an easy set to complete, especially if you omit date size and metal variations. Lincoln, Shield cents have been in production since 2010.

To mark the bicentennial of Lincoln's birth, the Mint produced four commemorative cents with reverses depicting significant moments in the president's life. With mintages in the hundreds of millions, the coins are common, but can be difficult to find in circulation.

THE 1815 CENT COINAGE

By R.W. Julian

Coin clubs often have quiz programs as a pleasant way of educating collectors to some of the lesser-known facts about coins and paper money of the United States. One such question has to do with the year in which no copper cent pieces were struck. The answer is invariably 1815 because that date does not exist as a genuine coin. Sometimes an explanation is given that a fire at the Mint stopped coinage, including cent pieces.

Unfortunately the above answer is wrong and cents were struck in 1815. The story begins in the summer of 1812.

In those days all of the planchets for copper coinage were imported from England, and the last such shipment was received in June 1812, just as war broke out between Great Britain and the United States. Under such circumstances no more planchets could be imported until the war ended.

Mint Director Robert Patterson carefully hoarded the cent planchets on hand, with the result that mintages in 1813 and 1814 were measured in the hundreds of thousands, rather than millions as in the past. The 1814 cent coinage used the last of the planchets on hand and then all Patterson could do was wait for peace to be declared.

In December 1814 the peace treaty was signed in Europe, but word did not reach America for several weeks. The Mint director was especially interested in obtaining a fresh supply of copper planchets because deposits of gold and silver had nearly dried up and there was no coinage of any kind at the Mint in the first several months of 1815.

Mathew Boulton's Soho Mint, which furnished copper planchets to the United States Mint from 1797 to 1837

Sailing ships put in at Philadelphia's docks in this 1875 print Philadelphia in the Olden Time.

The late war had been very expensive for the United States, and the government was hard pressed for ready cash. This meant that Patterson had to wait for some time until he could obtain funds to pay for a few tons of copper planchets.

The Mint had ordered its planchets from Matthew Boulton, the famed English private coiner, since 1797, and Patterson began post-war preparations by ordering five tons of cent planchets, about 470,000 pieces. At the same time, he notified the government of this order. Treasury Secretary Alexander Dallas, however, was concerned about the money involved and suggested that the Mint make its own planchets.

Patterson now faced the dilemma of having made an order for which the Treasury might not pay. The Mint director responded to Dallas by noting that the rollers were in poor condition and had to be reserved strictly for the silver and gold coinage. The Mint was therefore in no position to make its own cent planchets.

Dallas reluctantly agreed and allowed the arrangement to continue. However, Matthew Boulton was involved in other projects and unable to execute the American order in a timely manner; it was in fact some weeks before this relatively small number of planchets was loaded on board the ship Coromandel for the voyage to Philadelphia. It was normal practice to put the heavy wooden kegs into the ship's hold as they served as ballast in the rough seas of the North Atlantic.

The ship reached the Philadelphia docks about Nov. 20 and the unloading began. However, because the planchets were in the hold they were the last of the cargo to be brought up, and the kegs did not arrive at the Mint until early

The first U.S. Mint building in 1854, about 20 years after the Mint had moved.

December. There were the usual delays in getting ready for coinage, but by mid-month the striking of cents had begun.

If cents were struck in December 1815, as is clear from archival records, then why are there no cents dated 1815? Here the mint records fail, but it seems likely that no 1815 obverse dies had been prepared because Patterson did not know just when the planchets would arrive. Considering that two engravers were at the Mint, Robert Scot and John Reich, one would think that at least one of them could have carried out the rather simple task of preparing an obverse and dating it 1815.

If the 1815 date was not used, then which date was used in 1815? It is possible that 1814 should get the nod; though it is equally possible that Patterson had ordered new dies dated 1816 in the belief that the five tons of planchets would not arrive in 1815.

The dating problem is complicated by the fact that there is a new head of Liberty for the 1816 coinage. This was executed by assistant engraver John Reich, although Chief Engraver Robert Scot has sometimes incorrectly been given the credit. Perhaps “blame” is the better word as this particular design – of 1816 – is not one of the better ones to appear on the cent.

Yet, despite the above, cents dated 1815 do exist, sort of. It is just that they started life as some other date and an engraver made a few changes in the appearance, the last figure of the date in particular. Often this meant that an 1813 cent magically became an 1815 coin. The “new” 1815 cents were then sold to unsuspecting collectors and it was not until after 1860 that numismatists became aware that genuine cents of 1815 simply did not exist.

Many of the “1815” cents are, on the other hand, rather poorly made by amateur engravers. In a few cases the host coin was totally inappropriate; in one rather glaring case an 1845 cent was given a new look but here the design is completely wrong for 1815 as this head of Liberty was not introduced until 1842.

Mint Director
Robert Patterson

And what is the correct answer to the question about cents not being struck in a given year? It is actually 1823 when there was no copper coinage. There exist genuine cents dated 1823 but these were struck in 1824 using dies that had been held over.

A coin that does not exist

A skilled engraver altered the last digit of the date in an 1813 cent, like the one above, to look like a 5, creating an 1815-dated cent, a coin that does not exist.

One of the odder explanations for the lack of 1815–dated cents was made by a Mint officer in the 1850s. He claimed that, by accident, gold had been mixed with the copper and the entire mintage had to be melted to recover the gold. The officer in question obviously knew nothing about the Mint in 1815 because at that time all copper planchets came from England.

Occasionally one will see a comment that a fire in the Mint prevented the 1815 cent coinage. Actually there was a fire but it occurred in January 1816, not 1815. The blaze was confined to some wooden outbuildings, but in one of those structures the Mint kept its rolling mills.

The damage to the rolling mills really did stop coinage, but it was the gold and silver which was affected, not copper. The coinage presses were not damaged at all by the fire and within a few days the striking of copper coins resumed as there was a strong public demand for them.

1815 fantasies overstruck on large cents

Daniel Carr's Moonlight Mint creates its own 1815 cents, using genuine Classic Head (1808-1814) and Matron Head (1816-1839) large cents as planchets. Consequently, he notes, the fantasy pieces have the correct weight, metallic content and edge for the type. Carr strikes these and other Moonlight Mint pieces on a surplus Denver Mint coinage press.

Mint Director Patterson took the opportunity caused by the fire to remodel and repair other parts of the Mint as well. He persuaded the Treasury that the old rolling mills were beyond repair and new ones were needed; these were made in England to Patterson's specifications and were installed at the Mint in the spring of 1817, allowing the coinage of precious metals to resume.

At the same time Patterson was able to install a steam engine but it was not used for coinage. Instead it drove the rolling mills, which enabled the coiner to produce better-quality planchets much more quickly than the old horse-power had allowed.

Two-day class

‘Introduction to Grading’ class to precede convention

John Schuch II

John Schuch, II, former NGC grader and long time ANA Summer Seminar instructor, will conduct a two-day class at the Renaissance Schaumburg Convention Center in advance of Central States’ 80th Anniversary Convention.

Schuch, who joined Northern Nevada Coins as a numismatist this spring, previously worked as an NGC grader for 13 years. He has taught grading classes at the Summer Seminar for eight years and has taught classes at coin shows around the country.

“Introduction to Grading,” he said, will cover not only how to grade coins, but also how to recognize problem coins including some no-grade pieces, counterfeits and alterations, such as added Mint marks.

Schuch is a member of the Industry Council for Tangible Assets’ Anti-Counterfeiting Task Force, serving on the group’s education and research work groups.

The class will examine proper lighting, the subtleties of About Uncirculated versus Mint State, the differences between strike and wear and the key attributes commonly considered to constitute positive eye appeal.

Lighting, he said, is crucial. NGC graders, who handle hundreds of coins a day, work in a dark room with an incandescent light focused on the center of each grader’s desk. The class will consist of hands-on opportunities to view and grade a multitude of copper, silver and gold coins.

The class will be conducted from noon to 6 p.m. Monday, April 22, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 23, in the second floor Serenity Room at the Renaissance Schaumburg Hotel and Convention Center, in advance of the Central States convention, which runs April 24-27.

The convention’s security room opens at 1 p.m. Monday and will be available to grading students. The class is limited to 15 students, with registration offered on a first-come basis. Registration fee is $150. Checks should be made payable to CSNS and mailed to CSNS President Mitch Ernst, Box 24559, Omaha, NE 68124.

An 11-cent piece

One coin

Two denominations

By YN Isaiah Hageman

Double-denomination coins are a fascinating area of the error coin field. There are many different double denominations in the market currently, and many sales have been made. First though, what is a double denomination?

A double denomination is a coin that has been struck by the dies of two (or more) different coin types. Examples could include cents struck on dimes, quarters struck on nickels or nickels struck on dimes.

Double-denomination coins are extremely rare. The most common pieces of this error type are cents that are struck on previously struck dimes. Although they are the most common, these coins are still very rare.

How are these error coins made? The double denomination begins as a regular issue coin. After the host coin is minted, there are several different ways to create a double denomination. A Mint employee could take the coin and place it either in a bin for planchets of a different denomination or on the dies of a different denomination.

There is a legitimate way to creating these rarities, however. The host coin, after being struck, gets stuck in the bin that all of the finished coins are placed in. After that bin is emptied, planchets of another denomination are placed inside. The struck host coin is then dislodged from the bin, and is mixed up with the other planchets. The dies of that denomination then strike the already struck host coin, and a double denomination appears.

Collecting double denomination coins can be a challenge. “Double denomination errors are seldom offered for sale and when they are collectors jump at the opportunity”, writes the cataloger of the Heritage 2010 February Long Beach, CA, Signature U.S. Coin Auction about lot 931 of sale 1137.

Double-denomination coins are not cheap, either. These can be a challenge when collecting on a budget. Expect to pay upwards of $500 for a cent/dime double denomination and more when pursuing other denomination clashes. Since these fascinating error coins are rarely offered for sale, you should jump on any example that meets your budget and catches your eye.

The coin pictured is a 1994 cent/dime double denomination, with a cent overstruck on a 1994-P clad dime. It is certified MS-60 by the American

Details of both a dime and a cent can be seen on this double-denomination coins. The torch on the reverse of the Roosevelt dime appears on Lincoln's head. The Lincoln Memorial on the reverse of the cent is superimposed on Franklin D. Roosevelt's profile.

Numismatic Association Certification Service (ANACS), and is encapsulated in a late 1990s-era holder. Many collectors refer to this holder as the “soapbox” holder. The certification number is 2536638. As of July 4, 2018, the coin is unique for its grade, and is one of just 17 examples certified by ANACS.

On the obverse of this specific coin, detail from the cent is bold. Under the cent detail, parts of the torch and lettering from the reverse of a Roosevelt dime are visible. Also prominent is the words ONE DIME at 6 o'clock on the obverse.

The reverse of this double-denomination error shows an outline of a bust of Roosevelt behind the Lincoln Memorial. The words UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and ONE CENT also appear in great detail.

The coin has been graded MS-60. However, I do not believe that grade matters when purchasing an error coin like this. As long as the coin is problem free and attractive, grades that third-party grading services give error coins like this do not play a huge role in appraising the value of the coin.

YN Isaiah Hageman is a frequent contributor to The Centinel and other numismatic publications. He was awarded this year's Daniel C. Parker YN Literary Award for his article, “Grading Peace Dollars Is Simple (Sometimes),” which appeared in the Spring 2017 issue.

Fall seminar to cover toning, Nationals and coin negotiating

Numismatic experts Bob Campbell and Peter Huntoon will cover topics ranging from artificial toning to the money of the Great Depression during the Central States Numismatic Society's Fall Seminar.

The seminar, held in conjunction with the Michigan State Numismatic Society's fall show, will be held Sunday, Nov. 25, at Macomb Community College in Warren, MI, on the closing day of the Thanksgiving weekend show.

The schedule includes:

10 to 11:30 a.m.

Peter Huntoon: A Path to Building a World-Class National Bank Note Collection

Peter Huntoon, a renowned researcher and collector of national bank notes, will present a seasoned insider's perspective of what you need to know to succeed and prosper as a national bank note collector from getting your feet wet to disposing of your collection. He'll use examples from his own collecting days to illustrate the importance of available information, how the game is played, how to get along with the competition, how to work with the key players and even how to more fully appreciate the notes that you own.

Peter Huntoon

11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m.

Bob Campbell: How to Detect Artificial Toning, Artificial Frosting, and Re-Proofing

Past American Numismatic Association President Bob Campbell is a specialist in toning and counterfeit coin detection. He will give an informative talk about how to look at a coin's surface and think like a detective. Learn the color sequence of toning and understand the difference between natural air transfer vs. liquid and directional gas toning. He will teach you more in an hour and a half about how Mother Nature does it than it would take you over a decade of experience to learn yourself.

1:30 p.m. - 3 p.m.

Bob Campbell: How to Make a Rare Coin Deal

Bob Campbell is known through the industry as one of the best negotiators in the business of rare coins. Learn the secrets of how to understand body language and the art of understanding speech and timing to get the lowest price possible. This talk is about big sharks eating little sharks. It's not for the timid, and if you practice the principles that you will learn here it will save you thousands of dollars in your general life on all types of purchases. He owns and operates All About Coins Inc. in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Bob Campbell

3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Peter Huntoon: Creation of Money during the Great Depression: the Greatest Tectonic Shift in Federal Currency in U.S. History

The collapse of the American economy leading up to the election of Franklin Roosevelt in 1932 was one of the most dangerous events in U.S. history. To crawl back from the brink required a bold overhaul of our monetary system. The groundwork that laid the foundation for eventual recovery was accomplished by FDR's Treasury within two years and required redefining exactly what constituted U.S. money. The gold standard was abandoned and gold was confiscated from the public.

This presentation will take you through these events with a focus on how U.S. currency was restructured, which was an important step that eventually allowed the U.S. to become the dominant economic powerhouse of the world by the end of WW II. Collectors will see just what happened to their small size currency during this tumultuous period and why the various Series of 1934 currencies were launched.

Registration is required, with a Nov. 16 deadline. Cost is $25 for CSNS members and $50 for non-members, with $25 going to a first-time CSNS membership, if requested. For people who want to attend just one session, the cost is $12.50 for Central States members and $25 for nonmembers.

Financial sponsors include: Gold ($500+): Michigan State Numismatic Society; Silver ($250+): Brett Irick and Polish American Numismatic Society; and Bronze ($100+): Al and Ann Bobrofsky, Dr. Mark Benvenuto, Bill Brandimore, Lincoln Coin Club, Pennsylvania Association of Numismatists and Thomas Uram.

Classical Numismatic Group changes hands

Classical Numismatic Group has been purchased by longtime ancient coin collector and hobby leader Michael S. Gasvoda from partners Victor England and Eric J. McFadden. England and McFadden will continue as senior directors, with Gasvoda taking on a supervisory role as managing director.

Gasvoda

In a statement, the company reported the transition will take place Nov. 1 "but other than the change of ownership, all other facets of the operation will continue as usual. The firm's entire staff will continue at the company's offices in Lancaster and London. Formed in 1990, CNG is a leading dealer in ancient, medieval, world, and British coinages."

Gasvoda, a former trustee and first vice president for the American Numismatic Society, has been active with both the ANS and the American Numismatic Association, as well as the Chicago Coin Club and Tucson Coin Club. He has lectured and exhibited parts of his collection over the years at such venues as the Chicago International Coin Fair, the ANA's World's Fair of Money, and the ANA Summer Seminar. He also wrote numerous articles for The Celator magazine, and is a frequent contributor to The Numismatist.

"I am tremendously pleased that Mike has agreed to take on the responsibility for CNG's future. The most difficult transition for a coin firm is the first change of ownership, from the founders to the next generation, and we think Mike is the perfect person to handle this challenge," McFadden said.

Mount Rushmore $1 bill proposed

Senator Karl E. Mundt (R-S.D) has proposed that a depiction of his state's best known landmark, Mount Rushmore, be adopted for the reverse side of the one dollar notes. On January 18 Senator Mundt introduced a bill (S. 2823) which would replace the Great Seal with the heads of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt as shown on the Bad Lands monument. The Senator referred to the Great Seal as an "archaic monstrosity" and assailed the current decorative ONE also found on the note. Mundt presented a sketch for the new note which would still, however, incorporate the Great Seal. The Legislature of South Dakota and Congressmen from the state have introduced similar legislation in their respective bodies.

The meaning of coins left on soldiers' graves

Coins left on tombstones have meaning beyond remembrance, David Golden wrote in the June issue of The Cincinnati Numismatist, especially on military graves.

It can be seen as a sign of respect to those who lost their life serving in the military. It shows that their life had value and is something worthy of commemoration.

During the Vietnam War era it became common to leave coins for fallen friends for beer and poker games in the next life.

Arlington National Cemetery

“There is no standard tradition. ... So it does vary over the years, even in the denominations of coins, and according to the relationship between the visitor and the deceased as well.

Roughly, this curious custom at military graves is as follows:

- A penny means you knew the deceased or just visited to pay respects.
- A nickel means you went to boot camp together.
- A dime means you served together.
- A quarter at the grave lets the family know you were with the fallen soldier when he died.
- Challenge coins that identify with specific unit or accomplishment are also sometimes left on the headstone by fellow comrades.

What happen to the coins left on the top of gravestones? At Arlington National Cemetery coins left at President John F. Kennedy's Memorial and others are collected as donations to cemetery upkeep.

Pennies are also left at Edgar Allan Poe's grave in Baltimore. This stems from a 19th century act of altruism when school children saved pennies to buy him a proper marker.

Roscoe remembered

A grandfather's coin collection

Stephen Rayburn brought something very special to the January 2018 meeting of the Central Ohio Numismatic Association, a complete set of Lincoln cents, except for 13 coins, that he put together from cigar boxes of coins his late grandfather had accumulated.

The set, housed in a bookshelf album, had this dedication at the front, which tells a dear tale

By Stephen Rayburn
Grandson and collector

The completion of this collection is dedicated to my grandfather William Roscoe Claar. It was made from his lifetime of sorting out his “wheaties” from his pocket change. I remember as a child while at my grandparents’ house watching my grandfather coming in the back door and pulling his change from his pocket from the day. (Back in the day that you paid for everyday items in cash) He would stand there at the kitchen counter and pull the wheats from his pocket change and drop them in the cigar box inside the cabinet. He always said that one day he would sit down and sort through all those cigar boxes full of wheats and put together his collection.

We started assembly of this collection in 1981, soon after I graduated high school. I would go to my grandparents’ house once a week for dinner. After dinner we would bring out a cigar box full of wheats and go at it. After about an hour or so, we both would be a bit cross-eyed, only had filled two or three holes in the book and barely made a dent in the box. We both lost interest that summer in trying to complete his Wheaties book just from the sheer volume of coins to be gone through. We did not lose our interest in coins, that year I started collecting and would bring over any new additions to my collection for him to see.

In 1995 I inherited my grandfather’s coin collection; well it was more like a hoard. Cigar boxes filled with wheat pennies. I had tried several times since then to make his hoard into a collection, but just like in 1981 I lost interest and they sat in my attic. Then in early 2017 I had a brainstorm - a way to sort through all of those wheats. Surprisingly once I started it went pretty quick, here we are at the end of 2017 and his collection is complete. Out of the 141 coins in the series, he was only missing 13, he really did have a collection; it was just hiding in all those cigar boxes.

As I sorted through all of Roscoe’s Wheaties, all I kept thinking about, was he was the last person to touch each of these coins. It was special to have that connection with him after all of the years he’s been gone. While the 13 that I had to acquire were the rarest and most expensive in the book, the ones bearing his name are the most valuable to me.

Gramp, thanks for all that you have taught me, this book is for you.

When asked for more detail, Stephen Rayburn wrote:

More about my grandfather

Roscoe Claar was born in 1908 and passed in 1995. He was 87.

He retired from Columbus Coated Fabrics in Columbus, OH, in 1973, with 40 years of service. He had lived most of his life in Columbus, but was born in Altoona, PA, and was adopted and then raised as an only child.

He was an avid outdoorsman, loved working with his hands, tinkering on everything. I was the only grandchild, being raised by a single parent, his daughter; he was the driving male influence in my life. We did everything together, especially in the summertime since I was fortunate to have lived with my grandparents during the summers from age 9 to 17.

As for his coin collecting, it was mainly whatever score he made out of his pocket change. He was a factory worker and family man, so even though he liked collecting he did so within his budget. The only thing new that he ever bought himself was a 1957 Pontiac Star Chief, which I still have.

The 13 missing cents

The 13 coins that did not come from his cigar box:

1909-S VDB	1917-S	1928-D
1913	1920-D	1931-S
1914-D	1921-S	1935-S
1914-S	1923-S

Author Stephen Rayburn's sorting box

First let me explain how I sorted out all of the coins in the cigar boxes. I bought several of the nuts and bolts tote cases with removable little boxes. Then I made a custom holder for those boxes with four rows of 10 boxes in a row. I then sorted through all of the pennies sorting them down just by year; it was the only way I could get a handle on the volume. It took me almost a year to get through them. Probably an average of 3-5 hours a week?

It was really exciting to be stuck in just sorting through the '40s and '50s and an early teen or 20 would pop out, and I do remember that I hit three 1909s in a row! That was cool, but none of them was the 1909-S VDB, disappointment! But two of the three were 1909-S!

On finding rare coins

I was naïve at the rarity of some of these coins and how fortunate I was to have them sitting there in front of me. But I was excited for being able to fill the album as easily as I did. After I sorted them all into years, I would open a tube of a year and fill all mints for a year and then move to the next year.

I thought for sure that there was going to be so much more to fill in, when I was finished.

To defend my naiveté, this was the first time that I had ever really worked on a penny set. I have a Memorial set that my grandfather and I put together one summer in the '70s, but I have never really studied them. I have always been into quarters and half dollars.

I have a full set of Franklins and I am back to getting caught up on my Kennedy halves. The Kennedy halves were also my grandfather's fault. He always gave me Kennedy halves as gifts from as long as I can remember till Christmas of 1994. I have them all! Never spent a one! I guess I have my own hoard started, but it's organized, not just stuffed into cigar boxes.

I learned more about wheaties tracking down the 13 that I needed to finish his set than I ever knew about them beforehand. That is when I realized how wonderful it was to have this nice of a collection. It was just too bad that my grandfather never knew what he really had.

Inside one of the cigar boxes was a little brown bag that was all tattered, torn and dirty. I just thought it was a bag full of wheat pennies that had gotten thrown in without opening. It was nearly a full set of Indian heads. I am missing just 12 coins to finish that set for him. Working on it now!

1960s coin dealer's sign surfaces in antique mall

Editor's note: MNS life member Fred Borgmann recalled his early days of collecting in the July/August issue of the Milwaukee Numismatic News

There are not many left in Milwaukee who can remember the coin shop once located at 47th and Center on Milwaukee's north side. At some time in the 1950s, Polzer's moved there from the downtown area.

My first visit to the Center Street store was in early 1960s as a young junior high school student on my bicycle, a 28-block trip, one way. At the time, a very young Russ Konig was the counter man.

One day while looking at some coins in the counter I was able to see into the back room where a large framed picture was on the desk leaning against the wall, if my memory is correct. That picture was a drawing that looks like it was done with black ink and colored pencils picturing an owl at the upper left and a man wearing engineer's cap pushing a wheelbarrow full of money above GET A LOAD OF THIS.

The man and his money was later used on the shop's business cards and remained in my memory until I found that very same picture in an Appleton antique mall about 10 years ago.

The picture is unsigned and has the inscription starting at the top, The Old 'Hoot Owl' says: HAVE A HOBBY ... one that SAVES you MONEY! Polzer Coins."

Polzer's is now long gone, but I still have my memories, this picture and some of the items I bought there so long ago.

Collectors buy burgers to get Big Mac tokens

Collectors across the country had a quest in early August when McDonald's released Big Mac tokens, each good for a sandwich, at its restaurants around the world in celebration of the distinctive hamburger's 50th anniversary.

Just about the only way to get one was to buy a Big Mac. The tokens were distributed one-for-one to purchasers of the $3.99 hamburgers. The tokens had a common obverse, but five different reverses, one for each of the sandwich's five decades. And, it was luck of the draw which one the purchaser got.

With a mintage of 6.2 million the bronze tokens will never be rare, but that didn't stop collectors from buying Big Mac after Big Mac in an attempt to complete the set.

Patrick McBride, editor of the Pennsylvania Association of Numismatists' electronic newsletter, PANews, reported, "The coin bug impulse hit at noon on Aug. 4th with the purchase of a Big Mac at a McDonald's in Wilkinsburg, Western Pennsylvania. Well that was easy so I purchased two more but only got one more design. I made an inquiry as to how the distribution of the five different types would be handled and was told that each location was provided 250 tokens of mixed designs. Now this posed a dilemma as to the most efficient and cost effective way to acquire all five designs. I knew that the Big Mac was conceived locally in Uniontown, PA, and that there was actually a Big Mac museum at the McDonald's franchise in Irwin, PA, only a few miles away. I introduced myself to the store manager and related the idea of a numismatic article with a few photos of his store. I asked if he could muster up all five varieties and he did but I was required to make five separate Big Mac purchases, which I did."

In Columbus, Ohio, one collector had an easier time obtaining the set. In an attempt to drum up publicity among collectors, McDonald's marketing department gave a set of the tokens to the Central Ohio Numismatic Association. The set was auctioned at the club's summer picnic, with proceeds going to the Ronald McDonald House. Steve Petty snagged the set with a winning bid of $21.

ANA

CSNS Vice President Brett Irick was recognized as the Outstanding District Representative during the ANA Member & Awards Celebration Aug. 16 at the Philadelphia World's Fair of Money.

Like many collectors, Irick's love of coins began when he was young and working on a Boy Scout project. He joined the ANA in 1979 and continued to build his collection as time permitted during his 31-year engineering career with Ford Motor Co., where he developed two U.S. patents.

Brett Irick

Since retiring, Irick has been more involved in the numismatic community. In addition to serving as vice president of Central States, he is president of the Michigan State Numismatic Society, area director of the Royal Canadian Numismatic Association and president of the Windsor Coin Club. (As an ANA district representative, he serves Canada and Michigan.) Irick also is an ANA exhibit judge and has several award-winning displays to his credit, earning the Howland Wood Memorial Award for Best-of-Show Exhibit in 2010. Chicago Coin Club

Show and tell features edible coin, brothel token and cast counterfeits

Writing in the May issue of the Chicago Coin Club Chatter, John Riley reported on six variations on real coins exhibited during show and tell at the club's April meeting.

Mark Wieclaw showed three exhibits based on the theme: Real/Imitation.

- A genuine U.S. Walking Liberty half dollar and an imitation struck in lead. The lead piece had scratches in the field and the dark toning typical of lead.
- A genuine 1897 gold French 20 Franc Angel and a shell card brothel token, circa 1890-1900, imitating a 20 Franc. The imitation is ex-Virgil Brand Collection.
- A genuine U.S. statehood quarter from New Jersey, and a gold foiled chocolate imitation.

1897 French Angel

Image courtesy of Heritage Auctions

Bob Leonard showed three contemporary counterfeits of U.S. large cents.

- After showing an 1837 Hard Times Token, Low 33, with the reverse legends of MILLIONS FOR DEFENCE around, and NOT ONE CENT FOR TRIBUTE for reference, Bob showed a counterfeit made by extremely altering an example of Low 33: the NOT and FOR TRIBUTE were hammered out, and only the 7 remains of the date.
- Cast counterfeit with both sides showing the obverse of an 1837 obverse. It was not attractive looking, due to wear and poor casting.
- A “token” with the obverse of an 1855 Large Cent with upright 5s in the date, but with the reverse reading “NOT ONE CENT, BUT JUST AS GOOD” (Miller Boston 30½). In 1858, (Charles I.) Bushnell wrote, “This piece was put forth as a satire upon the national copper coinage” – a likely story!

Bob has been looking for counterfeit large cents for over 50 years, and only recently added a third example, the cast piece. Struck counterfeits of large cents are known for 1848, 1818, plus the 1795 Jefferson Head pieces and probably the 1793 Strawberry Leaf. The ANS has a cast counterfeit of an 1854 large cent, both sides, cast in brass.

UNDERSTANDING ANCIENTS

THE GREEK PELOPONNESUS

Hermes of Praxiteles, an ancient sculpture found in the ruins of the Temple of Hera at Olympia

The ancient Greek homeland comprised the Greek mainland, which extended from the European continent, as well as many islands and the Peloponnesus, a large peninsula to the south.

At this time the Peloponnesus was linked to the mainland only by a narrow strip of land at the Isthmus of Corinth. There were relatively few good harbors and the interior of the peninsula was mountainous and hilly.

In the late Greek Bronze Age (c.1600 to 1100 B.C.) the Peloponnesus was the cultural center of Mycenaean Greece. Chief among its cities were Pylos, Tyrins and Mycenae – all famous citadels from the age of the Trojan War.

Well after Mycenaean times, Greek culture thrived in the Peloponnesus. Mints at more than 70 of its cities issued coinage, with the most important of these being Corinth, Olympia, Sparta, Messene, Mantinea, Tegea, Argos, Sicyon, Megalopolis, Elis and Olympia.

There are a number of references for collectors of Peloponnesian coins, but the best – by far – is the catalog of the legendary BCD collection, prepared in 2006 by LHS Numismatics. Unlike most auction catalogs, it's presented in an academic fashion and offers a nearly complete record of this reference collection, for which no parallel exists.

It's impossible to do justice to Peloponnesian coinage in an introductory article, but at least we can touch upon four of the most collectible series.

Struck at Olympia c.244 to 208 B.C., this silver drachm would have been used by attendees of the Olympic Games. It shows an eagle capturing a hare, and an ornate thunderbolt.

Olympia. Located in the northeast of the Peloponnesus, Olympia is famous as the site of the Olympic Games that starting in 776 B.C. were held every four years. A great many silver and base metal coins were issued here in association with the games, all from ‘temple mints’ dedicated to Zeus and to his wife Hera.

This bronze dichalcon was struck at Sparta between about 48 and 35 B.C. It shows the bearded head of Heracles (Hercules) and his club within a wreath.

Sparta (Lacedaemon).

Known for its unique “military” culture and its political opposition to Athens, this city originally was hostile to the idea of coinage, which it considered effeminate. However, the Spartans eventually gave in: by the mid-3rd century B.C. they had struck their first coins, and they continued to do so – albeit in modest quantities – for the next 600 years.

An issue of the Arcadian League, this tiny silver obol was struck at Megalopolis c.340 to 330 B.C. It shows the head of the god Pan and the league’s monogram over the panpipe (syrinx).

Arcadian League.

Arcadia comprised the mountainous region in the center of the Peloponnesus. In addition to some independent civic issues, large coinages were produced by the league of its cities. These league coinages began in the 5th century B.C., but mainly were struck from the 4th through the 1st centuries B.C.

Achaean League. Based in the northern part of the Peloponnesus, this league issued a substantial coinage on behalf of its member cities. Though there were some early efforts at a league coinage, the main issues are silver and base metal coins of the 2nd and 1st centuries B.C.

This silver triobol/hemidrachm was produced by the Achaean League c.175 to 168 B.C. for the member-city Messene. It pairs the head of Zeus with the league monogram in a wreath.

David Vagi is an avid specialist in ancient coins. He is the director of NGC Ancients for the Numismatic Guaranty Corporation.

President's message

The average collector, and I include myself, would think nothing of spending $20 for a coin that he wanted, but when asked to spend an additional $2.50 for a registration ticket at a convention he will scream to high heaven. In the future every attempt will be made to keep the convention-goers informed in advance as to what to expect at the convention so that they will not be surprised at the gate. The registration fee will be kept to a minimum insofar as is possible.

Boosel

As a final note, the Central States Numismatic Society belongs to you, its members, and while we have a Governing Board to administer the affairs of the Society, you must remember that it is being conducted for your benefit. Constructive criticism is always welcome. You may have asked yourself in the past, "What am I getting out of CSNS?" The answer to that question might well be "What am I putting into it?" If one has an investment account and makes continual withdrawals only, the end is not long in coming. The more you put into your organization, the more you will get out in pleasure of having accomplished something worthwhile and having done something or your fellow members as well as having had pleasant associations.

HARRY X BOOSEL, President

CODE of ETHICS for the Central States Numismatic Society

(Adopted by the CSNS Board of Governors, October 6, 2007)

Membership in the Central States Numismatic Society is a privilege extended to persons and organizations worthy thereof and is not a matter of right. Such membership can be maintained unless the Board of Governors determines that the conduct of a member has been such that, in the best interests of the Society, his/her membership should be terminated.

For the guidance and instruction of its members, this Code of Ethics is duly adopted by the Board of Governors under the authority vested in it by the Constitution & By-Laws of the Society.

As members of the Central States Numismatic Society, we agree to comply with the following standards of conduct:

1. To support and be governed by the Constitution and By-Laws of the Society, and by such rules, policies and regulations that may be in force from time to time.

2. To practice conduct so as to bring no reproach or discredit to the Society, or impair the prestige of its membership.

3. To base all dealings on the highest plane of justice, fairness and morality, and to refrain from making false statements as to the condition of a numismatic item or as to any other related matter.

4. To neither buy or sell numismatic items of which the ownership is questionable.

5. To conform to the accepted standards of dignified advertising.

6. To take immediate steps to correct any error taken in any transaction.

7. To never sell, produce or advertise a counterfeit, copy, restrike or reproduction of any numismatic item that is not clearly indicated by the word "counterfeit," "copy," "restrike," or "reproduction" incused in the metal or printed on the paper thereof with the exception of items generally accepted by numismatists and not in any way represented as genuine.

8. To represent numismatic items to be genuine only when, to the best of knowledge and belief, they are authentic.

9. To never intentionally misrepresent the grade, condition, provenance or other material fact of numismatic items.

10. To fulfill all contracts, either oral or written, to make prompt payments upon delivery and to return any numismatic items that are not satisfactory.

11. To give aid to members in their quest for numismatic knowledge.

12. To abide by all local, state and federal laws relating to numismatic matters and items and, when applicable, to assist in the prosecution of violators of said laws.

13. To put the welfare of the Central States Numismatic Society above any personal gain.

A breach of this Code of Ethics shall be cause for action by the Board of Governors.
